the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and the number of people in the public sector has increased by 2.5 million (1990–1999) (Department of Health 2000).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the efficiency of the public sector and to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver the best possible value for money. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of the Health Service Act 1999, the Health Service Act 2001, and the Health Service Act 2004. These initiatives have led to a number of changes in the way the public sector is organised and managed, and to a number of changes in the way the public sector is funded.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop services that meet the needs of older people, and the need to ensure that the health care system is able to respond to the needs of older people. The Department of Health (2000) has identified the need to develop services that meet the needs of older people, and the need to ensure that the health care system is able to respond to the needs of older people.

the 1990s, the number of people in the United States with a college degree has increased from 15% to 25% (U.S. Department of Education, 1996). The increase in the number of people with a college degree has been accompanied by a corresponding increase in the number of people with a high school diploma.

One of the most significant changes in the U.S. labor market in the 1990s has been the increase in the number of people working in the service sector. The service sector has grown from 15% of the U.S. labor force in 1970 to 25% in 1990 (U.S. Department of Education, 1996). The increase in the number of people working in the service sector has been accompanied by a corresponding increase in the number of people working in the manufacturing sector.
