the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1999. The public sector has also become an important employer of people with disabilities, with 1.5 million people with disabilities employed in the public sector in 1999, compared with 1.2 million in 1980.

There are a number of reasons why the public sector has become an important employer of people with disabilities. One reason is that the public sector has a long history of employing people with disabilities. In the 19th century, the public sector employed people with disabilities in a number of different roles, including as clerks, typists, and stenographers. In the 20th century, the public sector continued to employ people with disabilities in a variety of roles, including as teachers, nurses, and social workers.

Another reason why the public sector has become an important employer of people with disabilities is that it has a number of advantages over the private sector. For example, the public sector is often able to offer people with disabilities a more stable and secure employment environment than the private sector. This is because the public sector is often able to offer people with disabilities a more predictable and stable income, and a more secure job.

There are also a number of other reasons why the public sector has become an important employer of people with disabilities. For example, the public sector often has a number of policies in place that are designed to support people with disabilities in the workplace. These policies can include things like flexible working hours, and the provision of reasonable adjustments to the workplace.

Overall, the public sector has become an important employer of people with disabilities in the UK. This is due to a number of factors, including its long history of employing people with disabilities, its advantages over the private sector, and its policies designed to support people with disabilities in the workplace.

There are a number of challenges that the public sector faces in its role as an employer of people with disabilities. One challenge is that the public sector often has a number of people with disabilities who are employed in roles that are not well suited to their abilities. This can be due to a number of factors, including a lack of training and development opportunities, and a lack of information about the capabilities of people with disabilities.

Another challenge that the public sector faces is that it often has a number of people with disabilities who are employed in roles that are not well paid. This can be due to a number of factors, including a lack of information about the value of the work that people with disabilities do, and a lack of competition for their services.

Overall, the public sector has a number of challenges that it faces in its role as an employer of people with disabilities. However, it also has a number of advantages that make it an important employer of people with disabilities. By addressing these challenges, the public sector can continue to play an important role in supporting people with disabilities in the workplace.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office of National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 10.5 million by 2026, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 6.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for ageing, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the lives of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- Older people should be able to live independently and actively.
- Older people should be able to access the services and facilities they need.
- Older people should be able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.
- Older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

The strategy also sets out a number of key objectives, including: to improve the health and well-being of older people; to improve the quality of life of older people; to improve the opportunities for older people to participate in the decisions that affect their lives; and to improve the support and services available to older people.

The strategy is a key document for the development of policies and services for older people. It provides a framework for the development of policies and services that are based on the principles and objectives of the strategy.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995. The public sector has also become an important employer of women, with 60% of public sector employees being women in 1995.

There are a number of reasons why the public sector has become an important employer of women. One reason is that the public sector has a high proportion of women in the workforce. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that women are more likely than men to work in the public sector, and the fact that the public sector has a high proportion of women in the workforce.

Another reason why the public sector has become an important employer of women is that it provides a number of benefits that are attractive to women. These benefits include a high level of job security, a high level of pay, and a high level of social security. These benefits are all factors that are likely to attract women to the public sector.

There are a number of other reasons why the public sector has become an important employer of women. These reasons include the fact that the public sector has a high proportion of women in the workforce, and the fact that the public sector provides a number of benefits that are attractive to women. These factors are all likely to contribute to the public sector's importance as an employer of women.

The public sector has also become an important employer of women because it provides a number of opportunities for women to advance in their careers. This is due to the fact that the public sector has a high proportion of women in the workforce, and the fact that the public sector provides a number of opportunities for women to advance in their careers.
