the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 6.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 4.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health and social care needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a strategy for the NHS to meet the needs of the ageing population. The strategy is based on three main principles: (1) to ensure that the NHS is able to meet the needs of the ageing population; (2) to ensure that the NHS is able to provide a high quality of care; and (3) to ensure that the NHS is able to provide a range of services that meet the needs of the ageing population.

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health care needs of older people, and a number of initiatives have been launched in the UK to address this need. The Department of Health has launched the 'Ageing Well' campaign, which aims to improve the health and well-being of older people. The campaign includes a number of initiatives, such as the 'Ageing Well' website, which provides information and advice on a range of issues affecting older people, and the 'Ageing Well' helpline, which provides a free telephone service for older people and their families.

The 'Ageing Well' campaign is part of a wider initiative to improve the health and well-being of older people, known as the 'Ageing Well' strategy. The strategy was launched in 1999 and aims to improve the health and well-being of older people by addressing a range of issues, such as health care, social care, and housing.

The 'Ageing Well' strategy is a key part of the UK's commitment to improve the health and well-being of older people. It is a multi-departmental initiative, involving the Department of Health, the Department of Social Security, and the Department of the Environment. The strategy is being implemented through a number of initiatives, such as the 'Ageing Well' website, the 'Ageing Well' helpline, and the 'Ageing Well' campaign.
